

the Survivors

This chair, this teddy bear and this dress are objects that I owned when I was a child. I stage each object which, being part of a natural environment, suggest an absent body. We are in an installation before being in a fixed image allowed by the photographic medium. The shooting allows me to create a new sensitive space through the image in which I reenact my childhood memories, thanks to these objects which are their symbols.